FOR RELEASE APRIL 3, 2020

4-H @ HOME

4-H British Columbia launches a new at home learning project, available to all youth in BC.

4-H British Columbia is pleased to offer BC youth an opportunity to keep busy while they are staying home by participating in the new 4-H @ HOME Project. 4-H @ HOME will support BC youth in applying the 4-H motto Learn To Do By Doing as they complete hands-on activities related to the 4-H Canada Leadership Development Pillars:

- Community Engagement & Communications
- Environment & Healthy Living
- Science & Technology
- Sustainable Agriculture & Food Security

This project is available at no cost to both to 4-H BC members, as well as youth who are not involved in 4-H. Youth can register online to receive a link to a Google Drive containing the 4-H @ HOME resources. Participants will complete 6 of the 30 activities in the drive to earn a 4-H @ HOME certificate. To register for 4-H @ HOME, visit: <https://www.eventbrite.ca/e/4-h-home-tickets-101579848060>

“4-H BC is happy to provide the 4-H @ HOME learning opportunity for both our members and other BC youth. We all must work together during this difficult time to stay connected while maintaining social distancing. 4-H BC is happy to play a part in supporting BC youth to develop skills to become leaders that will have positive impact in their communities.”

4-H BC Manager, Aleda Welch

4-H BC will also be posting new stand-alone activities to their 4-H @ HOME page each week.

What is 4-H?

4-H is a global non-profit organization focused on youth development. 4-H British Columbia’s mission is to inspire and educate, building awareness of agriculture and food production, and developing skills to help youth reach their full potential.
